Description of scientific activity	My scholarly activity concentrates on Victorian literature and culture, as well as on Victorian traces in the writing of later periods. In my academic publications I focus on social and economic problems as presented in realist fiction of the Victorian period. My book Vanishing realities. Social significance of material culture in Victorian novelistic discourse is a study of novelistic representations of selected aspects of Victorian material culture (dress, homes, leisure time), and it discusses the potential of the realist novel as a historical source, which could contribute to a better understanding of the complexities of the Victorian past. My scholarly interests include also Joseph Conrad and popular Victorian literature. At present, I am studying the British representations of Australia in literary and non-literary texts of the 19 th century.
