Description of scientific activity

I study the Platonic tradition from antiquity to the present, with particular emphasis on such areas as contemplation and mystical experience, philosophy as spiritual exercise and therapy of the soul, and the relation of myth and image to conceptual discourse. My interests include the philosophy of Late Antiquity and the Early Middle Ages, both pagan and Christian (Plotinus, Augustine of Hippo, Gregory of Nyssa, Boethius, Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, Maximus the Confessor, John Scotus Eriugena), as well as the mysticism and philosophy of the High and Late Middle Ages (Franciscan mysticism, especially Bonaventure, Angela of Foligno, Ubertino of Casale, as well as Marguerite Porete, Meister Eckhart and Nicholas of Cusa).
I also study the reception of the Platonic and Christian-Platonic tradition in the modern period, from Renaissance Platonism and Jakob Böhme, through the Cambridge Platonists and Gottfried Wilhelm Leibniz, to early German, British, and Polish Romanticism, including the so-called esoteric tradition. I also work on the writings of the Inklings—J. R. R. Tolkien, C. S. Lewis, Owen Barfield, and Charles Williams—with particular attention to the relation of myth and image to philosophy in their work. I am also interested in psychoanalysis, including philosophically and religiously oriented thinkers who emerged from it, such as Carl Gustav Jung and Wilfred Bion.
